Can you store living things in a storage unit?

Storage unit rules do not allow you to put living things in your storage space. This includes plants, animals, or even once-living items like corpses or taxidermy. You cannot store any living things in a storage unit.

Should you rent a storage unit?

If you're considering renting a storage unit, there are a few guidelines to be aware of. Like garages, attics, and basements, there are items you should not keep in a storage unit. There typically are actual rules about what can and cannot be stored in any given storage facility, so it's a good idea to look into that before signing a lease.

What can't you store in a storage unit?

Storage unit companies have strict rules about what you can keep in a storage unit. You can typically store anything that's not on a list of prohibited items--but those things can vary by company. You obviously can't use storage units to hide stolen cash or deceased pets, but not all prohibited items are as clear-cut.

Should you store illegal items in a storage unit?

So, unless you want to return to a unit infested with pests and filled with the stench of rotting food, it's best to keep perishable goods out of your storage unit. Storing illegal items, such as stolen property, illegal drugs, or unlicensed weapons, in a storage unit is a straight path to legal trouble.
